Suicide Facts:

Unsupervised teen gun access triples the risk of death by suicide.

50% of survivors made an attempt within 20 minutes of their decision to attempt suicide.

Of youth who completed suicide, 82% used a firearm from their home.

Emotional Triggers Should Not Be Lethal

What can you do to keep your teen safe?

- The teen brain is still developing, which puts them at risk for many types of serious injuries
- Knowing risks for injury and using a barrier can help keep your teen safe
- Teens can engage in risky behaviors and react to seemingly small stressors
- Even with no history of depression, teens sometimes make impulsive decisions with deadly results. Education alone is not enough.

Barriers are Effective

Risks

Firearms:
- 90% of suicide attempts with a gun are fatal
- Nearly 2/3 of all US gun deaths are due to suicide
- The rate of firearm suicide by teens is up 61% over the past 10 years
- Teens should not know the combination or location of keys to gun safe

Medications:
- Teens often take medications in suicide attempts
- Both prescription and over-the-counter medications can result in overdose deaths
- Tylenol, when taken over suggested dosage, can cause life-threatening injuries or death, even if appearing symptom free for the first 24 hours

Alcohol:
- Alcohol is the most commonly used and abused drug among youth in the US and is readily accessible in homes
- Alcohol causes more than 4,300 deaths among US teens each year

Barrier as Prevention

- Even if experienced with guns, teens should only have supervised access to them
- Keep any firearms that are not under your direct control locked away
- Ammunition should also be locked when not in use
- Consider temporarily removing guns from the home if someone is suicidal
- Always keep prescription and over-the-counter medications locked away and out of the reach of children and teens
- Have a family conversation about the dangers of misusing medications
- Never share medications with family members
- Dispose of prescription medications after the period they are prescribed

- Like medications, alcohol should be locked away and not accessible to teens
- Talk to your teen about alcohol and potential dangers. Keep the lines of communication open and let your teen know that they will not be in trouble if they come to you with concerns.
Should I talk to my child about mental health and suicide?

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>My child is an honor roll student</th>
<th>My child is in the school band</th>
<th>My child is a star athlete</th>
<th>My child doesn't participate in after school activities</th>
</tr>

<tbody>
<tr>
<td>My child has only a few or no close friends</td>
<td>My child has lots of friends</td>

YES! Every parent should be having honest and open discussions with their teen no matter the circumstances. Depression and suicide may be hard to recognize which is why an open dialogue is key.

Have frequent conversations with your teen on this topic even if your teen seems disinterested. Incorporating into your normal routine such as during family dinners is an easy way to do so. It is important to stay engaged.

Warning Signs:
- Depression and other mental concerns, or a substance abuse disorder
- Feeling hopeless and worthless
- Previous suicide attempt(s)
- Feeling detached and isolated from friends, peers and family
- Family history of suicide, mental illness, or depression
- Knowing someone with suicidal behavior (i.e. family member, friend or celebrity)
- Severe stress or anxiety
- Sudden changes in behavior such as talking less or becoming disengaged

Whether your child has mental health concerns or not, teenagers should not have unsupervised access to any lethal means. This includes guns, prescription medication, and over-the-counter medicine.

Resources:
Your teen's safety is important to you, your doctor, and members of your community. You deserve to have all the information possible to prevent injury risks.

1) Have a discussion with your teen and their pediatrician
